This image shows a full page of graph paper. It features a uniform grid of small squares created by light gray dashed lines. The grid covers the entire area of the page, leaving no margins or other markings. This type of paper is commonly used for mathematics, science, and engineering to plot graphs and draw geometric shapes.

The image shows a calendar page for Friday, May 22nd. The header is a light gray bar at the top, containing the text '5 | 22 FRI' in a bold, sans-serif font. Below the header is a large grid of dashed lines, intended for writing or drawing. The grid consists of 22 columns and 10 rows, with the first column being slightly wider than the others. The overall design is clean and minimalist.
